

TURNER Cod.1902

Woven from pure wool, spun in Tuscany, TURNER is characterized by a refined micro-chevron structure combined with satin-derived passages. The weave results in a compact, well-defined textile with a lively material presence, where warp and weft interact in a controlled, rhythmic way. TURNER is defined by a clear dual-face character: one side displays a fluid zigzag with a gentle wave-like movement, animated by subtle shifts in tone and texture, while the other presents a compressed, stepped zigzag that reads more vertical and architectural. This duality gives the fabric versatility, offering two distinct visual expressions within the same construction. The hand is full, warm, and compact, well suited to upholstery, seating, and interior accessories. The design draws inspiration from archival tailoring wool fabrics, reinterpreted through a cleaner, more contemporary graphic approach and carefully calibrated color accents. Up close, the weave reveals depth and detail; from a distance, it reads as composed and cohesive.

The color range moves from nuanced pairings such as brick red, deep black, and ocean-toned blue with ivory, to richer, natural hues including petrol teal, olive green, warm orange, and rust brown. TURNER is a fabric defined by texture, rhythm, and proportion, where wool and weave work together with measured precision.
